Notification Regarding Market Developments and Potential Price Adjustments

As a result of the recent geopolitical tensions in the Middle East and the resulting uncertainty surrounding energy supply and global transport corridors – including the Strait of Hormuz – we are currently experiencing significant fluctuations and increases in the prices of raw materials, energy, and logistics.

This development is increasingly affecting global supply chains. Several of our suppliers have already announced price increases, and in some cases, force majeure has been invoked in connection with deliveries.

We are monitoring the situation closely on a day-to-day basis and continuously assessing the impact on our cost levels. Our prices are always determined based on current market conditions, and we remain fully committed to keeping costs for our customers as low as possible.

Despite our efforts, we must point out that the continued developments may necessitate price adjustments to our products. Should this become necessary, any changes will be announced and reflected in updated quotations and order confirmations.

We remain committed to ensuring stable deliveries and high quality at competitive prices and will, of course, keep you informed if the situation develops further. If you have any questions, you are—as always—very welcome to contact us.

Kind regards,
Peter Busk Jensen
